The Purpose of Saint Mary’s Catholic School Suggested Reading List

Saint Mary’s Catholic School seeks to nourish the intellectual gifts of its students, teaching the children the truths of the faith supported by right reason. An integral part of this formation is the reading of quality literature.

In order for children to think according to the truth, they need first to learn the truths of the faith and of themselves as creatures made in the image of God. Yet more than that: children must also have their imaginations fed by enriching, edifying, and nourishing literature. Children whose minds are nourished with truth, goodness, and beauty through excellent books will have the tools necessary to navigate through the philosophical errors of our time and culture, the imaginative power necessary to build a culture of life, and the strength of character to become what God wants them to become. Simply stated, children who read great literature will be able to think clearly, choose wisely, and love rightly.

A child's mind is formed as he/she grows. If that mind is not formed deliberately according to truth, goodness, and beauty by reading quality literature it will be formed by and according to the errors present in our modern culture and in the popular media. This suggested reading list is a means of providing quality literature to children and to their families. Since it would not be wise to read poor or even mediocre literature when there are so many good books to read, and since it would be a waste of time to pass over good books simply in favor of what is new because it is new, this suggestion list is to be an easy reference guide in finding worthy books to read.

This is a thoughtfully-crafted list of inspiring literature for children in grades K-8. Its main goals are four-fold:

1. To help Saint Mary’s students think according to truth, goodness, and beauty;
2. To develop in St. Mary’s students a great love of reading;
3. To provide Saint Mary’s students with a means of becoming well-read and culturally literate children and youths; and
4. To encourage children to become life-long readers.

Reading Good Literature

"Good literature increases our resistance to cheapening influences. Children who read have broader sympathies and a larger picture of life. They develop more powerful, healthy, and discerning imaginations. And imagination is one of the keys to virtue" (Kilpatrick 23).

"Great stories give us the grace of a mystical experience, on the level of the imagination" (Kreeft 18).

Great children's literature is marked by the following qualities:

- It has a captivating plot; that is, a good work, something worth doing.
- It has great characters (or at least one great character) with whom readers can identify.
- It has a great setting, an interesting world—whether it is small or grand in scale, whether it is familiar or new in scope.
- It is written with great style, including word choice, tone, and syntax.
- Its philosophy—infused with the light of truth, goodness, and beauty—provides insight into ourselves, our lives, and our world (Kreeft 19-20).
- It has the capacity to intrigue not only children, but also adults.
- It has withstood—or will be able to withstand—the test of time (Bennett 108).

Using the Suggested Reading List

- The books on the lists below have been chosen specifically for their literary and moral qualities and their high "likability."
- Some of these books are available at the St. Mary's library; they and others are also available at public libraries, at local bookstores, and through the Internet.
- Small boxes have been placed next to each book title, allowing for an easy way for you to mark what books you have read and how well you liked them.
- The book lists included on the reading recommendations are by no means comprehensive, as there are plenty more wonderful books in the world to read than you will see herein. However, if a child reads what is on these lists, he/she (and his/her parents) can be sure that what he/she is reading is of high literary and moral quality.

The Reading Expectations

- St. Mary's students are encouraged to begin using this book list immediately upon receiving it, as a hungry child would be inclined to step right up to the table to enjoy a fabulous meal.
- The children ought to read for pleasure through the summer and throughout the school year. Since the books that are recommended are pieces of truly good literature, it should not be a struggle to get children to read them. Just as a child heads towards the kitchen when he/she smells something delicious cooking, so will he/she be attracted to "delicious" books when he/she senses their goodness.
- A good book is always worth reading more than one time. Just as a child may want a second or third cookie to eat simply because they are so scrumptious, so a child may want a second or third reading on a particularly "tasty" book.

The Grade Levels

"No book is really worth reading at the age of ten which is not equally—and often far more—worth reading at the age of fifty and beyond." - C.S. Lewis

- Next to each book on the list is a designated grade range at which the book would likely be most suitable for reading.
- The grade levels indicated denote for a given book not only its difficulty of vocabulary, number of words, and average number of words in a sentence, but also they reflect the maturity level required for thoroughly enjoying the book.
- The grade levels indicated are a general—not rigid or restrictive—guide. Because readiness to read a given book varies widely among children, suggested grade levels should not be used in a way that will either discourage or limit a child's reading. Similarly, the grade levels ought not push a child ahead of his/her individual readiness (Wilson 17).
- It would be better for a child to read broadly at his/her grade level—and so become more well-read—than to read at a higher grade level and to, thereby, miss some outstanding literature.
- The children should feel free to read any books on the lists, since all the books are worthy of reading.
- If a book is too difficult for a child to read or if it exceeds a child's maturity level (thereby preventing the child from thoroughly enjoying it), he/she ought to wait to read it until his/her reading skills improve and his/her maturity develops.
- Books that are too difficult for a child to read can be read aloud to him/her with great pleasure and success.

- The books that are listed as K-2, K-3, etc. are not specifically books that kindergarteners are to read on their own. While some kindergarteners may be able to read some of these books themselves, they are chiefly to be read aloud to the children.
- Older students who have not read books marked for lower grades would do well to read those books so that they can be more well-read and culturally literate.
- Anyone who is too old to be read to is too old. Similarly, anyone who is too old to read a book written for young (or younger) children is also too old.

Rearing a Reader

Parents will find the following lists helpful as they seek to help their children to develop a great love of reading and to become life-long readers (see Hunt 36-37).

Ten Ways to Raise a Reader

1. Restrict television watching drastically.
2. Keep the computer under control and where it can be monitored. Don't allow too many hours on pointless computer games or in chat rooms.
3. Have books and other good reading material with easy reach, an enticement to read.
4. Let your children see you reading.
5. Read books aloud together regardless of age.
6. Talk about books together; play games together.
7. Have well-lit rooms with comfortable chairs that invite reading.
8. Balance activity schedules with reading time. Let your kids know the library is as important as the gymnasium.
9. Encourage reading in bed with good lights to do so.
10. Visit the library often, and listen to books-on-tape when traveling.

What Good Literature Does

Good literature:

- Instructs children about the ways of the wide and unfamiliar world they are entering;
- Offers lessons about how to live a good life;
- Educates children in the history, beliefs, and aspirations that we Americans hold as a people;
- Teaches children the images, symbols and expressions that Americans hold in common— knowledge that is indispensable to a rich intellectual life;
- Puts children in contact with the great and long conversation that echoes through the ages, embodying mankind's greatest ideas and achievements, making the children heirs to a grand tradition. (Bennett 102-105)

At St. Mary's we wish to offer our children truly good literature, the best of what has been thought or said because of the impact it has—and the lasting impression it makes—upon the child's heart, mind, and soul. With this in mind, we present the following lists of books for your child. First, please find below the guiding principles and questions that are considered to determine if a book qualifies for the suggested reading list.

How a Book Qualifies for the List

"Finally, brothers, whatever is true, whatever is honorable, whatever is just, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is gracious, if there is any excellence and if there is anything worthy of praise, think about these things." Phil. 4:8

"Do not conform yourself to this age but be transformed by the renewal of your mind, that you may discern what is the will of God, what is good and pleasing and perfect." Rom. 12:2

Guiding principles:

- To implement, enrich, and support the instructional program of St. Mary's.
- To build a collection that supports the Catholic school curriculum and is balanced with representation of various points of view on different subjects.
- To select reading materials that are rich in literary merits that will excite students to discover the joy and beauty of the literary world, which will inspire readers to seek truth and wisdom, and that will encourage moral and ethical rectitude.

Questions to consider:

General:

1. God is represented as the source of everything that is true, good, and beautiful. In this book, which of these qualities is reflected? How?
2. What is the purpose of this book: to entertain, inform, inspire? Given the purpose of the book, how does it communicate information? Is it well-written? Does it have a hidden message?
3. What in this book is worthy of praise? Why is it worthy of praise?
4. What in this book is beautiful?
5. What in this book is excellent?
6. Are good and evil portrayed as clearly distinct or are they confused?
7. Does the book glorify goodness or evil? Which is shown in a more favorable light?
8. Does the book present as true anything that is actually false?
9. Does the book contradict Church teaching or Christian doctrine in any way? Does it support striving for the ideal in a fallen world?
10. If the book mentions God or the Church, does it do so according to the truth of God and of His Church?

Characters & dignity of the human person:

11. The true dignity of the human person is that he/she was made by God and destined for life in Heaven with Him.
  - a. How does this book present the true dignity of the human person?
  - b. Is it ennobling of or demeaning of the human person? If it is ennobling, how so?
  - c. If the book mentions anything about human sexuality, does it do so in a noble and pure way?
12. Characters in fiction are the way that the reader gains information.
  - a. Are the characters presented as ignoble or base in any way? How so?
  - b. Are the protagonists in the book truly honorable and virtuous or are they merely "nice"? Are they vicious to no purpose?
  - c. Is evil presented in such a way that suggests that it should be tolerated or embraced?
  - d. Do the characters that choose to do evil in the book get their due justice?
  - e. Do they get away with their sins?
  - f. Do they repent?

Philosophy & Mechanics

13. The philosophy of a book (fiction or nonfiction) is summarized as the way that reality is presented as such. The philosophy of a book greatly influences the way characters or facts are presented.
  - a. Is the philosophy/worldview behind the book in accord with reality?
  - b. Is it easily discernible?
  - c. Is it materialistic, relativistic, or nihilistic?
14. Is the book well written? Excellently written?

“Never read books you aren’t sure about...even supposing that these bad books are very well written from a literary point of view. Let me ask you this: Would you drink something you knew was poisoned just because it was offered to you in a golden cup?”
 -Saint John Bosco

“Occupy your minds with good thoughts, or the enemy will find the bad ones. Unoccupied they cannot be.”
 -Saint Thomas More
